

Mark Bowden, PhD, PT has 18 years of experience as a physical therapist, working as a clinical practitioner, therapy manager, research physical therapist, and researcher. His current research emphasis is on walking recovery after neurologic injury, focusing on both outcome measurement and treatment interventions. Dr. Bowden draws from his clinical background and experience with quantitative assessment tools to examine motor learning as it relates to functional walking recovery. In addition to his SCI research award, Dr. Bowden is currently funded as a PI on a VA Career Development Award and is a co-investigator on four other funded studies.