Campus yard waste is added to the successive corrals. By the time the last one is full, the first is ready to empty and the compost used in the flower beds and campus landscaping projects thus saving on fertilizer costs.