How do telemedicine appointments work?
You will be placed in a room in front of a computer with a webcam. The staff at the site where you go for your appointment will “call” the computer at MUSC and you will be connected to the specialist through the computer. You will be able to see and hear the specialist and the specialist will be able to see and hear you. It is almost like sitting in the room with them.

A staff member at the site of your appointment may assist the specialist during the visit. The assistant may use special exam devices, such as cameras and an electronic stethoscope, to complete the exam. Or, the dietitian may use food models or put up images on the screen for you to view.

Telemedicine can save you time, money and can give you better access to your specialty health care providers.

Not all visits can be completed through telemedicine. The specialist can determine if it is right for you. You do not have to use telemedicine, and you can always request to be scheduled for a regular in-person visit.
